John Edel spoke in McTrib to an audience of over 50 students and faculty.

He spoke on his work at the Plant, Chicago’s vertical farm.

He followed his talk with a Q and A where he answered students’ questions on sustainability, the future of farming in cities, and the operations of the plant.

The Plant is a model that WildRoots looks to for innovation in urban farming. Through the talk we gained support for our group and learned about innovative farming techniques to employ in our garden.
